I moved from different people to different people. I was kind of a social chameleon, trying to please everybody and make sure I was cool to everybody, every group. So sometimes I'd be with the more stereotypical-like prep kids but they were using, too, or sometimes I would be with the more kids that were called freaks and they'd be using different kinds of drugs ... but I never purposely gave up a group of friends because of what they were doing or what they weren't doing.
