

Brad

Once you start using drugs, or at least once I started using them, I met the kind of people who had the drugs that I wanted, and it made it much easier to obtain them because usually one of my friends would be able to either give me some or sell me some. What I learned is that users thrive themselves on other kind of users.