

Partying, dancing, hanging out,
your teenagers live in a totally different world that may include marijuana.

Learning to recognize warning signs of marijuana use can help protect your kids.

Being a teenager is an exciting time, but it's also a time when they'll be exposed to the risks of marijuana. Statistics show that marijuana is the primary drug used by 57% of all Asian-American and Pacific Islander youth ages 12–17 admitted for drug treatment. Now, you can protect your kids from marijuana by being aware of the signs of drugs and drug paraphernalia, including: (1) Pipes and cigarettes or "rolling" papers, scent of burnt leaves on clothes and in the bedroom. (2) Use of eye drops to clear redness in eyes. (3) Clothes, posters, jewelry and accessories with images of marijuana, drugs or phrases that promote drug use. As a parent, your role in protecting your children from marijuana is crucial.
